Two dead in murder-suicide had advanced Lyme disease

The bodies of George and Jonalyn Strobo were found Thursday at a Pilot station.

Strobo said his parents are from Texas and that they were in Florida for almost a year seeking medical attention for "an advanced disease state."

He declined to say what the disease was.

Strobo said both sought treatment in Texas, but that was unsuccessful, so they decided to see a specialist in Florida who was willing to treat them.

He did not know where they were being treated.

He said the last time he talked to them was late last month.

Strobo said his parents had no friends or family in Ocala, and he has no idea what they were doing in the area.

He said his parents loved traveling together, and the reason they had two trucks and two trailers was because they had all their belongings with them, including Dolly.

"They loved the dog unconditionally," he said.

Strobo said his only sibling, a brother, died at age 19 from cancer 10 years ago.

The Strobos' vehicles, a green 1998 Dodge pickup, a white 2001 Dodge pickup, a 2006 Gulf stream Cavalier travel trailer and a 2006 utility trailer, were parked at the Pilot Station around 5:30 p.m. June 29.

Ronald Ernst told the Star-Banner on Thursday that he parked his trailer beside the vehicles at 11 a.m. July 1.

At the time, he said, he did not notice anything suspicious and left the area.

He returned Thursday to pick up his empty trailer and that's when he heard the news.

Employees at the Pilot store told deputies the four vehicles had been there for 10 days.

During that time, notices were placed on them stating that they were parked illegally and
